It has had a ravenous sort of appetite the most of the time it has been on board here, but every thing it took soon passed through it. Had some rhubarb and chalk mixture occasionally without any apparent benefit. Stomach generally rejected medicine and even its food sometimes, about a week ago it had aphthae of the mouth &amp; tongue accompanied with fever, gave it some castor oil &amp; Rhubarb, but nothing would remain on its stomach – the weather was very warm. I sponged the body with salt water and kept the head wet with vinegar &amp; water, with apparent benefit. Bowels now very loose, stools always dark &amp; foetid much restlessness. Hab. p.

Deduct the three sent away, and there will remain - 123 prs.

All the prisoners embarked were in a healthy condition with the exception of the one that I had to send to the Hospital Ship “Unite”, and the child that died on board. I have the satisfaction to state that I saw them disembark in a higher condition, good spirits, and all healthy. There were one on the sick list for fourteen days previous to their disembarkation.

Touching at the Cape of Good Hope was of essential benefit to them, many of them previous to touching there had swollen Legs & Boils. I had about twenty-four more on the list than are in the Journal, but they were all slight cases like the slightest cases in the Journal, of bowels & stomach complaints.

I kept the prisoners always on deck during the day while the weather and duty of the ship admitted of it, excepting when I sent them below for punishment.

I had two women to superintend the cleaning of the deck below, one on each side with four or five women under her. There was scarcely a day, that they were not sprinkled, scrubbed or scraped – by that plan with which I commenced, I ended, and am pretty well convinced, I had much less trouble, and the duty performed at the same time performed with more efficiency than by the adoption of the Admiralty Instructions.

I never had occasion to use any of the Chloride of Lime, nor any of the Stoves.

P. Fisher.
