| Apoplexia PA300942.JPG | 39 | Elizabeth Cook Æt 40 Prisoner 18th Oct at sea Died 19th Oct | This woman of large frame and debilitated & broken-down constitution, and subject to Epileptic fits, at 4 o'clock on the evening of the 18th October presented herself with the following symptoms, rigors and coldness of the extremities, nervous twitching of the muscles of the face and arms – articulation indistinct, breathing hurried, pulse small & irregular – Half a drachm of volatile spirits with thirty-five drops of Laudanum and two ounces of mint water were given in a draught. At 8 PM the patient was in a calm sleep, the pulse had got up about 65 & soft, the skin moist and of a natural heat, nervous twitching entirely subsided – at 6 AM the patient was found dead in her bed – the night was stormy and a heavy sea running which made the ship very uneasy and it appears that her complaints (if she made any) were not heard nor her state noticed, even, by the women who slept with her in the same berth. She was one who had been previous to her transportation rather respectable, which preyed upon her mind and on the day of her being taken ill she had been seen weeping and commenting upon her fate - In consequence of the state of the weather, the only part of the body examined after death (and that with difficulty) was the Brain where sufficient cause was found to justify the conclusion that her death was caused by Apoplexy induced perhaps by mental sufferings, and likely preceded by an Epileptic Paroxysm to which she had been subject – On examining the coverings of the cerebrum the vessels diverging on the surface were seen much enlarged and distended with blood and on the surface of the right middle lobe a small tumour was discovered about the size of a common bean, containing a thick curdy substance about the consistence of cheese. This no doubt had for a long time existed and was the effect of previous disease – the right ventricle was filled with a bloody fluid, the left, which was much distended with dark coagulated blood, the vessels of the plexus choroideus were also enlarged – the third & fourth ventricles contained bloody fluid, but in none was there a coagululum except the left, here then the rupture took place which caused her death – externally the body presented a strong bony formation, much wasted in muscular flesh, the neck and supine part of the Thorax were livid from effused blood, and blood had also been discharged from the nose – the mouth was filled with frothy saliva. |

The infant became very uneasy, bowels relaxed, continued crying. A warm bath was had recourse to, afterwards ten drops of Tinct Opii with one of the Ol Menthae and two drachms of water were administered in a draught. (18th) The child was found dead by the mother's side, she herself being unconscious of its death. She stated that it had gone to sleep sometime after having had the bath and that about 4 AM she awoke it, when she observed that its breathing was rather hurried, that it again fell asleep and that she continued to believe it so, until the moment of the visit at 8 AM when it was discovered to be dead – On examining externally the body, the lower jaw was rigidly fixed, the lips covered with mucus, limbs relaxed, abdomen tumid and it appeared the bowels had been much relaxed during the night. (19th) The woman continues to improve, bowels not moved. Hab Ol Ricini Zi (20th) Passed a good night, bowels freely acted on – debility – from this period the Patient continued to improve. On the 17th of October she was attacked with Haemoptysis, which was preceded by slight pain in the thorax and some degree of |

A Blister was applied to the chest which relieved the pain, her bowels cleared out by a saline cathartic, and for some days nauseating doses of the Tincture of Antimony were administered with evident good effect, she nevertheless continued to cough up occasionally a small quantity of frothy blood, her pulse became frequent, and although there was no degree of Pyrexia present, she was tormented by incessant thirst. The Sulphuric Acid with the Tinct Digitalis was prescribed, and occasionally an opiate at bed time, care been taken to keep the bowels free by purgative Enemas, the Digitalis was carried so as to effect the frequency of the pulse, which is at length effected, and it was then discontinued. On the 20th November she again complained of pain in the right side of the Thorax. She had coughed up much bloody, and frothy matter during the day, and it was now for the first time that purulent matter was detected amongst it. Her debilitated state at this time prevented the application of the means which, had formerly relieved her, and recourse was had to friction with the ointment of the Tartrate of Antimony, with Antimonials and acidulated diluents. The pain in the Thorax was relieved. The cough continued purulent, expectoration increased, the face became flushed, urine high coloured, heat of surface and burning hot of the palms of the hands etc so that by the 10th Novb, it was evident that Hectic Fever was fully established. The examinations of this malady were well defined & took place regularly twice during the 24 hours, sometimes with increased violence, at others with less severity. And in this state the unfortunate sufferer was reduced to the last extremity. She lived however, and on the arrival at Hobart Town was sent to the Colonial Hospital on the 4th December. |

About midnight she got out of her berth and went to the water closet from whence the cries of an infant were soon after heard to proceed from. The woman who had suspected her state being then awake immediately proceed ran to the closet and actually drew out of the pan a female child, apparently arrived at the full period, the miserable mother was found in a state of Syncope from which she was with difficulty aroused. On the removal of the Placenta, which it was found necessary to do by the introduction of the hand, haemorrhage followed and for two days to an alarming extent, but which was happily arrested by the usual remedies. On the 12th November following when perfectly recovered from her suffering, by her accouchement, extensive inflammation of the knee joint took place, which terminated in suppuration and extending along the posterior part of the thigh. The matter was evacuated by an opening made in the lower and lateral part of the capsule, from which a large quantity continued to be daily discharged, It was now that Diarrhoea appeared for which Chalk, Opium, catechu etc were administered with but |

GENERAL REMARKS

The Westmoreland being fitted for the transportation of female Prisoners, arrived at Woolwich on the 3rd July, and continued receiving them, from the different prisons in the Kingdom until the 12th August, when, having embarked One Hundred and Eighty-five, and Eighteen children, she sailed for Hobart Town, Van Diemen's Land. On putting to sea, we were so unfortunate as to encounter strong westerly winds, and it was not until the 24th of the month that we had cleared the channel; during this period the Prisoners suffered very much from sea sickness, more so indeed than I had ever seen on any former occasion, and which, as is usually the case, was followed by obstinate costiveness, requiring the most active purgative medicines to subdue it. Pursuing our course to the Southward we were favoured with moderate weather, the temperature daily and gradually increasing, and on the 24th of September, we found that we had reached the equator, the winds continuing to favour us, we crossed the Southern tropic on the 6th of October, the highest degree of temperature observed being 82° of Fahrenheit. It will be seen, by referring to the sick list, that it was during our passage through the tropics, that we had most to contend with, several cases of Inflammatory fever occurred, some few of Catarrh, Pleuritis and Diarrhoea and Dysentery, the two last being the usual followers of costive and irregular bowels on board of ship, where it is no doubt aggravated by temperature and close habitation, and in this instance where the Hundred and sixty women were treated, many of them, three or four times over, with the most drastic medicines. I am the more astonished that so few of the latter appeared among them. The ship, however, I must remark was well calculated for the conveyance of prisoners, being seven feet height under the beams, thereby affording lofty berths and good circulation of air.

By the 19th of October we had passed the meridian of the cape of Good Hope and proceeding on a S.E. course we soon began to experience a more congenial climate, the temperature had much decreased, the weather was moderate and clear, and its beneficial effects were soon observable in the increased activity and improved looks of the Prisoners. The additions to the sick list became now less frequent, and with the exception of two slight cases of Scurvy which readily yielded to the usual remedies, nothing worthy of notice took place during the remainder of the voyage, which was at length happily terminated by our arrival at Hobart Town on the 3rd of December – With respect to the deaths I beg leave to refer to the cases inserted in this journal, one was caused by Apoplexy, the subject a woman forty years old, the second I am inclined to think took place in consequence of convulsions. The sufferer was a child born on board and only six days old. The night previous to her death, she was afflicted with Diarrhoea, and it will be seen from the state of the mother, who was suffering from Inflammation of the Uterus, that the Infant was without its natural nourishment from its birth.
